Annual winter Irish film series offers variety

We hope to see you at our annual film series. Travel with us as we journey through Ireland from county to county. And all of this without boarding an airplane or riding a coach. It will happen all through Irish films which remind us of the "ties that bind."

Each of these films shows the Irish in several counties and the characters portrayed all in unique situations. Our free Irish film series will be held on four consecutive weeks—two on Wednesdays and two on Thursdays starting January 30, 2013. Each film is shown at 7:00 p.m. The films at the Alumni Library Theater are:

Wednesday, January 30, Rated R, 1995 "Run of the Country" Albert Finney stars in this moving Irish love story about a bullying widowed cop and his fed-up son who runs away and finds love in the arms of a woman from Northern Ireland.

Thursday, February 7, not rated

1978 "Poitín" In Irish with English subtitles.

Cyril Cusack is a moonshiner in rural Connemara, living in an isolated cottage with his adult daughter. Two local degenerates played by Donal McCann and Niall Toibin, terrorize the old moonshiner for his contraband liquor, until the moonshiner outwits them.

Wednesday, February 13, PG 13, 1990 "The Field" Richard Harris stars in this drama, set in western Ireland during the 1930s about one man's obsession with a plot of land that his family has tended for generations.

Thursday, February 21 Not rated, 2005 "The Boys and Girl of County Clare" Colm Meaney and Bernard Hill play estranged brothers whose rival music groups meet for the first time in 20 years, at the International Irish Music festival in County Clare.

March Ceili brings music and dance

The Irish Cultural Center invites one and all to join in the fun at the Sons of Erin in Westfield for our ceili on Sunday, March 3 at 2 p.m. We will have ceili dancing with local musicians providing the music. We will serve Irish tea and breads and have a 50/50 raffle. We especially invite families with children to attend this free event.

Leo Doherty and his musicians will play the jigs and reels. Dance instructors Mary Ellen O'Brien and Kelly O'Sullivan will demonstrate and direct participants in the steps. In addition, the McDermott Academy of Irish Dance will give a dance demon-

In modern usage, a ceili is a traditional Gaelic social gathering, which usually involves playing Gaelic folk music and dancing. It originated in Ireland, but is now common throughout the Irish and Scottish Diasporas. Before discos and nightclubs became popular, there were ceilis in most town and village halls on Friday or Saturday nights; they are still common today.

The music is cheerful and lively, and the basic steps can be learned easily; a short instructional session is often provided for new dancers.

Member renewals

Thanks to those who have sent their renewals for 2013 and an especial thanks for the generous support of our newest lifetime members:

Michael Conlin
Kathryn Gallivan
George Podmore
Kathleen Riordan
James Sullivan

What a testament of their belief in the Irish Cultural Center and our programs!

Please encourage your friends to become a member. You can find the form on our web site.

St. Brigid feast

For the second year in a row we will offer a celebration of St Brigid in honor of her feast day, Sunday February 3, 2013. Fulbright teacher Ciara Cosgrove will host the event and give instructions for the making of the cross.

Julia Campbell, who teaches the children arts and crafts at our Celtic Adventures for Kids in July, will assist her. We will provide reeds for the crosses and leave with a cross to place over the door for protection. We encourage our members to put the date on your calendar and plan to join us for the celebration in honor of the great female Irish saint

Sympathy offered

We offer our sympathy to the family and friends of Peggy Sullivan; to the Dugan Family on the loss of ICC member Mary Kloster; to family and friends of ICC members John Flynn and Bernard Moran.

The Irish Cultural Center strives to “keep the Irish arts alive.”

The Irish Cultural Center...

- Serves as a public forum for events, including lectures, musical presentations, films and exhibits
- Promotes ties between the Center and educational organizations in Ireland, especially with the Blasket Cultural Center
- Serves as an academic link with Irish American social organizations in Western New England.

Christmas with an Irish Touch

By Mary Ellen O'Brien

On Saturday, December 1st, the Irish Cultural Center observed its annual, “Christmas With An Irish Touch” celebration.

The afternoon’s festivities started with a sing a long, in Irish, of some traditional Christmas carols led by board member Chip Costello and Ciara Cosgrove the Fulbright Scholar who is teaching the Irish language this year at Elms College. Following the singing session those in attendance viewed the video, “Maire Begley’s Kerry Christmas.” Maire is the eldest of the musical Begley family from the West Kerry Gaeltacht on the Dingle Peninsula. In the video she shares her love for the Christmas season and recalls many of the old holiday traditions that were so much a part of the culture of the area. The baking, the sand in the crocks for the Christmas candles which were to be displayed in the windows, and the preparations of straw costumes for St. Stephen’s Day, the Wren’s Day, were all memories that she lovingly expands on in the presentation. In addition to these memories the video showcases some of the region’s talented musicians and breathtaking scenery. Many of those in attendance that afternoon commented on how the video brought back many memories for them of their holiday celebrations as youngsters in Ireland.

Journey of the Soul to Ireland, Scotland in August

By Kathy Gallivan

In 2013 the Irish Cultural Center will be sponsoring a “New” Journey of the Soul grand tour. For the very first time, we will be offering a tour that will be heading off to explore two amazing countries with breathtaking scenery, fascinating history and vibrant cultural traditions! It’s the year of “The Gathering” to Welcome You Home—Be Part of It!

This is an exclusive, “one-of-a-kind” customized tour that is well-rounded with multiple night stays for a more leisurely tour. You’ll experience the beautiful countryside and dramatic coastlines as well as cities bursting with historical attractions and events. Enjoy built-in flexibility to explore on your own and engage in options such as harbor cruises, walking tours or listening to traditional music as you immerse yourself in the local culture and experience the heart and “soul” of Ireland and Scotland. The tour has many wonderful and exciting places to visit such as the birthplace and new awe-inspiring $124.4 million state-of-the-art Belfast Titanic Experience center that opened in 2012 for the 100th anniversary of the launching of the legendary HMS Titanic—“It is not a museum. It is an experience.”—The Huffington Post; the Cobh Heritage Centre in County Cork, the most important port of emigration, where over 2.5 million adults & children departed from between 1848-1950; the fascinating 5,000 year old Stone Age passage tomb at Newgrange (Brú na Bóinne - “Palace of the Boyne”) ~ an archaeological wonder that predates the Egyptian Pyramids by 500 years and is over 1,000 years older than Stonehenge. See Page 4 for more details on this exciting trip!

Testimonial — Bidding slán a fhágáil to Sister Judy By Mary Ellen Lowney

We will miss you, Sister Judy. More than 150 well-wishers filled the banquet hall at the Wherehouse? in Holyoke on Nov. 17 to say goodbye to the woman who has been at the helm of the Irish Cultural Center for the past decade – Judith Kappenman. The Sister of St. Joseph, author, and friend to so many was lauded by the likes of Bishop Emeritus Joseph F. Maguire, Bishop Timothy McDonnell, Elms College President Sister Mary Reap, Springfield City Councilor and former ICC President Timothy Allen, ICC founders Sister Kathleen Keating, SSJ, ICC President Sean F. Cahillane and Elms College Professor Emeritus Thomas Moriarty. The night included poetry to honor Sister Judy, as well as live entertainment by long-time ICC friends Banish Misfortune and Black Sheep. A banner draped over the head table declared ‘Sister Judy Rocks!’ Speakers at the dinner event spoke of Sister Judy in superlatives. Sister Mary Reap said she admires Sister Judy for the time and energy she put into raising awareness of the ICC across Western Massachusetts and beyond. “We are so grateful that you have meant so much to us,” said Sister

Sr. Judy holds court with Bishop Emeritus Joseph F. Maguire

Mary Reap. “She has enriched the college in so many ways, from helping to pass on the Irish language to working on the Fulbright Scholarship program. We are going to miss her so very much.” Bishop McDonnell also offered praise. “Sister Judy, you’ve brought together in your 10 years people who have helped us grow in our Irish culture and heritage. The ICC has been a tremendous blessing for us. You’ve made that possible with a song in your heart,” Bishop McDonnell said.

ICC board members, past and present

Other speakers at the event included past ICC Presidents Gearóid ‘Chip’ Costello and Timothy Allen, and ICC board members Francis Hennessey, Mary Ellen O’Brien and Mary Ellen Lowney.

Sister Judy ran the operations of the ICC during a period of growth and excitement that included a visit to the center in 2009 by then-Irish President Mary McAleese, the collaboration and development with the Elms College on a Fulbright Scholarship program, now in its third year, and the recently published ‘Irish Legacy,’ a collaboration with The Springfield Republican.

During her time at the ICC Sister Judy also wrote a book about her grandfather John Donahue, ‘To Dakota and Back: The Story of an Orphan Train Rider.’

She thanked all for sharing in her celebration, singling out her family, her fellow Sisters of St. Joseph, members of her St. Michael’s Cathedral Parish, and members of the Irish Cultural Center.

The Gathering: Come home to Ireland in 2013

Local author Dr. Michael Carney to unveil book in Dingle on May 24

This is the year to visit Ireland, if you have never been before. The Irish government is sponsoring a year-long welcome called ‘The Gathering,’ featuring events around the country all year. The Gathering website has national as well as regional information, and is at <http://www.thegatheringireland.com/> The Dingle Peninsula, where so many of Greater Springfield’s Irish claim ancestry, is hosting a week-long festival of events May 23-29. That ‘Welcome Home Week’ will include the May 24 launch of Dr. Michael Carney’s new book ‘From the Blasket Island to America,’ which he co-wrote with his son-in-law Gerry Hayes. Carney left his native Blasket Island in 1948, setting roots in Springfield and raising a family. Now 92, he returns often to his homeland, and will be at the launch at the Great Blasket Centre in Dunquin.

Other Dingle area events will include a ball, horse racing on the beach, boat trips and guided tours, a seafood festival, a visit to the new Dingle Brewery & New Dingle Distillery, a jewelry and fashion show, and more. Contacts for that trip are ICC President Sean Cahillane, scahillane@comcast.net, and the Blasket Center at blascaod@opw.ie.

Attendees learn about names by Chip Costello

Ciara Nic Oscair, the Irish Fulbright teaching assistant, delivered an informative, entertaining workshop on surnames and place names on Saturday, December 8th. The forty attendees learned about the most common surnames associated with certain areas in Ireland. In addition, they learned that surname themes evolved from religion, trades, traits, feats, or other endeavors. The place names, on the other hand, were typically associated with people or geographical features including trees, forests, land, or bodies of water. Although there was a good mix of Irish and non Irish speakers among the attendees, it became clear that an appreciation of Irish would help in unlocking the important stories contained in the surnames that were discussed. Gillespie, for example, comes from Mac Giolla Easpaig which means son of a devotee to the Bishop. Smith comes from Mac Gabhann meaning son of the smith. Foley is the anglicized form of Ó Foghlach meaning of the plunderer. There are some Foleys in our family and can now bring out this information should it be required. Finally, the name Walsh is derived from Breatnach meaning a Welshman.

The logainmneacha or place names similarly reveal characteristics or origins of the location. For example, Donegal is from Dún na nGall which means fort of the Galls or foreigners. Another name for Donegal, probably preferred by locals, is Tír Chonaill or Connolly's Country. Our presenter's home county is Monaghan from Muineachán which means land of little forests or thickets. Other common Irish words such as Dún (fort), Baile (town), Ard (height), Ath (fjord), and Trá (beach) can be seen in Dundrum, Ballina, Ardmore, Athlone, Tramore, or Tralee.

The audience was getting more confident and understanding the themes until they saw this last place name: Muckanaghederdauhaulia. The town is located in Galway and is probably easier to pronounce in Irish rather than its anglicized version. This town land comes from Muicineach Idir Dhá Sháile meaning the pig marsh between two saltwater. This Irish term is now thankfully the official term after the Language Act of 2003. If you were unable to attend the workshop, the website logainm.ie is a great resource to investigate your relatives' town land. If surnames interest you, then you can use The Surnames of Ireland by MacLysacht. In any event, be sure to join us for upcoming workshops on legends/storytelling and language lead by Ciara Nic Oscair.

Springfield 2013 Colleen finalists to be chosen; public welcome to attend

On Saturday Jan. 12 2013, at 7 p.m. at the John Boyle O'Reilly Club on Progress Avenue, Springfield, the Springfield St. Patrick's Parade Committee will hold the Springfield Colleen Contest Preliminaries.

Five finalists will be chosen from the group of contestants.

Everyone is invited.

A donation of $10 will be accepted at the door.

New ICC members welcome

Newly elected ICC Board President Sean F. Cahillane has made new membership a priority as he begins his three-year term at the help of this group that he helped found 12 years ago.

Cahillane is making a personal outreach for new members, and is issuing a call for all members to share this with friends and family who would support and participate in our range of activities that help keep the Irish heritage alive.

For information, visit our website at <http://www.irish-cairde.org/>, where a membership for is available, or call us at 413-265-2537,

Sister Judy at her desk

Sister Judith Kappenman, S.S.J., on one of her last days at work at the Irish Cultural Center. As a neighbor and lifelong member, we know we will be seeing her again soon, and often.

Visions of rhubarb By Chip Costello

At this time of year, there are visions of sugarplums dancing in childrens' heads. Maybe it changes as you get older, but I have visions of rhubarb. That's right. I'm a true rhubarbivore. Muffins, pies, cobblers, cookies, jam, and jelly are all gratefully accepted in our household. As I think about it, I acquired the taste when I was young. We always had plants in the garden. Although some neighbors would find stewed rhubarb too much of a mouth puckering summer event, we found it to be delightful.

So as I was travelling in Ireland this summer with Tim and Kevin, it should come as no surprise to those who know my weakness that I would implore the driver to stop the car just south of Clifden. There was some palpable consternation on their faces.

Their unknowing eyes saw some leafy vegetation propped next to a rock wall by the side of the road. I, on the other hand, recognized these green, stately, heart shaped, welcoming, majestic plants to be rhubarb. I immediately got out of the car, grabbed my camera, took some pictures, then checked to make sure they were saved.

The pictures captured the front, back and side views of the plant. Although these specimen were far larger than what I was used to seeing, I assumed, like a Texan, that all things were bigger in one's own locale. My mates were blissfully nonplussed by my aberrant behavior. Maybe they knew something. In any event, we travelled on to Dingle.

We stayed for two days at the Milestone House in Milltown, Dingle. As was our practice, we selected our B and B on the fly. Michael and Barbara Carroll were terrific proprietors. They were knowledgeable, friendly, and absolutely interested in their guests' comfort. They were great ambassadors for the area. Some things just seem to happen for a reason. When I entered the dining room the following morning, there was a sparkling, full bowl of stewed rhubarb. Go sabhala Dia sinn! I displayed all due restraint but was transported into another realm. I chatted with Barbara about how she prepared it. After all, I was now in the midst of a true rhubarb druid. Aside from the great accommodations, this newly acquired information sealed the deal.

The balance of the morning was spent investigating various places outside of town. We managed to have lunch with some good friends and teachers from Oidreacht Corca Dhuine – Máire Sheehy and Máire Ní Scanlann – and, wouldn't you know it, a botanist.

My antenna went up when I heard that the lady was a botanist. My vision was complete: I could speak in Irish and cite the massive rhubarb plants I had seen outside of Clifden. I'm sure she appreciated the effort to express myself in Irish; however, I could sense the story would not end well. Her eyes dropped a bit to deliver the bad news.

Ní biabhóg í. Is gunnaire é. Tá na boithre lán de fhiailí.

It's not rhubarb. It's gunnare. The roads are full of the weeds.

I understood everything except gunnare. As it turns out, gunnare is a significantly invasive plant that looks like a giant rhubarb. It can be seen in western and southwestern Ireland. I passed on dessert.

It really could have ended worse I suppose. The Qianlong emperor of the Qing Dynasty forbade the expert of tea and rhubarb to the Russians after a border dispute in the North of China. Can you imagine not having those two staples in your diet? I'm thankful I wasn't a Russian at that time.

By the way, if anyone else looks at my trip pictures, they will never know that these noble plants weren't rhubarb. Despite a few wrong turns, I'm confident my quest for the ultimate rhubarb vision will be restored. I am looking forward to my next Dingle trip and plan to stop at Garvey's to buy some rhubarb yogurt.

The Irish Legacy book launch — a stunning success story

“The Irish Legacy: A History of the Irish in Western Massachusetts” was officially launched on Dec. 9 at a party hosted by the Irish Center and The Republican in Alumnae Library at Elms College in Chicopee. The book, which is the first in the series of hardcovers from The Republican on different area ethnic groups in the area, has sold hundreds of copies and earned praise from Irish Ambassador Michael Collins. Recently retired center director Sister of St. Joseph Judith Kappenman served as editor of the book along with former center director Anne-Gerard Flynn, lifestyle editor of The Republican.

“The series was conceived by Wayne Phaneuf, the paper’s executive editor, and we invited the center to collaborate because I had a good feeling that Sister Judy would say yes

“There is also that ‘little’ parade every year in Holyoke,” added Flynn of determining content for the book that features stories on the societies and the parade as well as on settlement, the role of faith, jobs and service and the culture. Flynn said Sister Judy’s collaboration made the book “very doable” in terms of garnering

“I don’t think a lot of younger people know about the accomplishments of Boland and O’Brien, both Springfield natives, and it is nice to have them highlighted in the book. The fact that the book also takes the story from the Irish coming here because of famine and oppression to the peace achieved with the 1998 Peace Accord is also a nice arch and perhaps speaks to a heritage for the Irish as peacemakers in the world,” Flynn said. Flynn said U.S. Rep. Richard E. Neal, D-Springfield, who writes about the peace process in “Irish Legacy,” has been very helpful in getting broad exposure for the book that is now in the Dublin office of Gerry Adams, Sinn Fein president who was instrumental in the 1998 Peace Accord and who is now a representative for County Louth in the writers, like Philomena “Phil” Hanrahan, who wrote about her husband and other Irish born firefighters in Springfield, and broadening topics for the book, as well as getting the word out that such a book was scheduled for November publication. The Republican held two sessions – one at the Boyle and one at The Wherehouse? in Holyoke -- and invited people to submit photos and other material for inclusion in the book.

to the concept of a book celebrating Irish immigration here, and she did so immediately,” Flynn said. “The center’s board was in support at an exploratory meeting in May at the paper and a number of members agreed to write articles for the book.” Flynn said a book on the Irish debuted the series since there are a number of other long established societies – the John Boyle, in Springfield, the Sons of Erin of Westfield, and the Ancient Order of Hibernians James A. Curran Division One of Hampden-Hampshire Counties – in the area.

“We got a lot of wonderful photos from families for ‘Irish Legacy.’ I think that is the aspect that makes me most proud of the book. I tried to ensure, with Sister Judy’s help, that the book has good historical information and is broadly representative of the Irish and their contributions, but the participation of families and individuals seems to have truly made it their book.” Flynn added she liked the piece on the late U.S. Congressman Edward Boland and U.S. Postmaster General Lawrence F. O’Brien by Mary Ellen Lowney, ICC secretary, who also wrote the piece on the Blasket islanders.

Irish parliament. The book has been featured on CBS-3, WWLP-TV22’s MassAppeal with Ashley Kohl and on WGBY’s Connecting Point with Carrie Saldo. It is available from the center for $39.95, with a portion of sales benefitting the center. Flynn said books in the series for 2013 publication include “The Struggle for Freedom: The History of the African Americans in Western Massachusetts” as well as ones on the Civil War, and the Hispanic and Jewish communities.
